Austria-Hungary-Genealogical Potpourri

George Fulton is a retired chemist and industrial hygienist. His interest in genealogy began when his father inherited the family papers of cousin's Alice and Edna Rollins which included numerous family obituaries, photographs, notes on the family for several generations, and Alice's DAR application papers. His interest in genealogy continued as a teenager hearing stories of his mother's family in Europe. His grandfather was born in Vienna, Austria, and his mother was born in the part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire that became Czechoslovakia. Family stories included the statement that his family is related to Gregor Mendel, the founder of the modern science of genetics, although none of the relatives knew how. To make a long story short, we now know exactly how, and are amazed at the quantity of genealogical records now available for all parts of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. This talk will be an overview of the resources available.
